Canadian Oak Comparison

Tuesday, June 26, 2007

Join us as we find out what differentiates Canadian oak from its French or American counterparts, and further, discover first hand what Canadian oak aged wines taste like and how they compare to wines with other oak treatments. Derek Barnet, winemaker at Lailey Vineyard Winery will be leading us through the barrel cellar for a barrel sample of their Canadian Oak wine. We will then proceed up to the loft where we will have a comparative oak tasting. For more information go to the website:

The Fine Wine Reserve

<http://www.finewinerreserve.com/>

GLEN C. SIEGEL

Hidden away near the bustly intersection of King and Spadina in downtown Toronto is the wine lovers' paradise called The Fine Wine Reserve. There's no sign, no indication of what is down below. If you have wine stored there, you already have the id card and your thumb print is on file so you can get through the layers of security and into the Reserve.

Although the OWS's wine is stored there, I do not have the magic card and the computer doesn't recognize my thumb so I ring the unmarked door bell and walk down the stairs and wait in the hallway.

Marc Russell swings open the door and invites me into the antechamber. It's cool and dark and there are two doors in front of me... do I go left or straight through??? Left it is as there isn't a security card reader on that door. This is the members tasting room where Marc and I spend some time talking about the Reserve before he showed me around.

Members Tasting Room

OWS: Why did you open The Fine Wine Reserve?

MR: I'm a former geologist who had lived in 39 places in 7 countries when I returned to Toronto. I wanted to settle in Toronto I was looking at some ideas for businesses when I was given a bottle of Port for my 40th birthday. This was one of the good ones that need to be cellared for a while but I didn't have anyplace to keep it. I started looking around Toronto and realized that there were no storage facilities for wine although they are really common in other countries. I figured that there would be a small market for this type of venture.

OWS: So why are you in this downtown location instead of up north where the rents are cheaper?

MR: When I decided to open the Reserve, I knew that it would be hard to find the perfect location. I wanted to be somewhere that would be accessible for my clients but would also be appropriate for the facility that I would need to build. A great many of my clients work in the Bay street area or they live in the waterfront condos or they are downtown to go to the theatre or a sporting events. I wanted someplace that they could drop in after work, on the way home to pick up the wine for dinner or for after the theatre. I also wanted enough space to build this tasting room so that my clients could drop in with their friends to taste that special bottle. The tasting room has glasses, serving plates, dishes, cutlery, a convection oven and a dishwasher for members use.

Hallway with Wine Cabinets on both sides

I looked at over 100 locations for selecting this one. It had the basics to create the premium wine storage facility I wanted to build.

OWS: So what services do you offer to your clients?

MR: There are two different broad categories.

First there is the Private Cellaring. You have your own private wine cellar at home, except that it is here and I worry about the temperature and the humidity and the security. You look after your wine. This is the service the OWS has. You look after your own wine in your own cabinet. You had 24 / 7 access to the facility. You get invited to the various tasting events that are held here in the tasting room. The only real variations in this service are how big your space is and if you add in the 24 / 7 access to the tasting room.

The smallest space holds 8 cases of wine and costs $33 per month. The unlimited access to the tasting room, for "drop in" use or private bookings is $5/month. Space is available in multiples of 8 cases up to 48 cases so you can start small and trade up as your collection builds. When you open your account, we install a new lock and key for your space. You can also get walk-in wine cellars that hold between 200 and 600

Cabinet showing one of the two racking systems - cabinet is two bottles deep

The other category is Custodial Cellaring which is tailored to the needs of each client. The clients do not have direct access to their wine. It is stored in large rooms and I'm the only one with the key. If the client wants a specific case or bottle, he contacts me and I retrieve it from the cellar for him. The people who want this service tend to be people who are moving and do not have anyplace to store their wine and the "All Star" collectors who just have too much to store. Although they are only about 25% of my clients, they are well over 60% of my work here as I do everything for them.

OWS: How big is the Reserve?

MR: It's around 5600 square feet.

OWS: It must cost a fortune to keep everything at the correct temperature.

MR: Not really. It's a matter of designing and building the right facility. This building doesn't get direct sunlight and we are in the basement. Since it's an old building, the walls are between 2 and 4 feet thick. To this, we added vapour barrier and then 5 ½ inches of insulation. We insulated the ceiling which is 6 inch thick wooden planks. The climate is maintained with 7 zoned compressors for even air flow. We only need between 2 and 3 compressors but the 7 give us better air flow and built in backup. We also humidify the space as required. We are at a constant 55F and 65% relative humidity. There are thermometers around the Reserve so people can check this whenever they are here. The one time there was a power failure, we only changed by 1 degree Farenheit in 17 hours. All the wine acts like a giant heat sink so that it's a very stable environment.

Just Off the Vine ...

The Ontario Wine Society's Newsletter

MR: Let's walk around and you can see everything.

The Reserve is dark because of the low wattage lights and quite cool but the air is surprisingly fresh. The wine cabinets are built from rough sawn pine with an dark stain but there is no odour that might creep into your wine. As we walked around, Marc turned on the humidifier jets to show me how they worked.

This place is amazing. For more information, contact Marc Russell at 416-593-9463 (593-WINE) or send an e-mail to info@finewinereserve.com

CHÂTEAU DES CHARMES WINES

Niagara Farm to Table Experience

The Bosc family invites you to come and experience a celebration of Niagara's freshest bounty, produced locally and brought directly from the farm to your table. Your experience begins in the St. David's Bench Vineyard as you join Michèle Bosc in a discussion that gets to the very "root" of our viticultural practices by focusing on a specific grape variety. Next you will meet a local food purveyor who will describe the nuances of growing their specialty food item. Learn how this local grower nurtures and coaxes their crop to life. Then to bridge the gap between diner and grower, a pioneer of the Niagara Farm to Table movement will create a delectable tasting featuring the purveyors' home grown goods. When this sampling is paired with a Château des Charmes wine made with the same grape variety highlighted earlier by Michèle, this truly becomes the ultimate Farm to Table experience.

Completing this entire series, all three of our featured chefs will unite to prepare a feast fit for any food lover. Each course will be specifically paired with its own Château des Charmes wine, maybe even two!

Sip, Sup and Swing at The Briars

Sip, Sup and Swing will be held June 4 starting at 6 p.m. at the gorgeous resort on Lake Simcoe, The Briars Inn and Spa in Jackson's Point, Ontario. Natalie MacLean will host a wine tasting as part of this gala lakeside evening that will be followed by a buffet dinner, a live auction with news anchor Peter Mansbridge, and entertainment by the Juno award-winning Prairie Oyster and Molly Johnson. Your host for the evening is the dynamic Shelagh Rogers of CBC's Sounds Like Canada. The cost for this spectacular evening is $250. The proceeds will go to Frontier College, Canada's original literacy organization. For information, call Sandi Kiverago at 416-923-3591, ext. 318 or visit <http://www.nataliemaclean.com>.
